

Committee doesn't budge on bus fees

By Lisa Boudreau

Parents who were keeping their fingers crossed in the hopes that the School Committee would rescind busing fees at its Tuesday night meeting left disappointed.

The committee voted 3 to 1 not to rescind the fees that affect students who live less than two miles from school.

The committee also voted to place a two-child cap on the fees, to lessen the burden on families with many children riding the buses. Those who live between one and one-half and two miles pay $119, and those under one and one-half miles pay $206.

Susan Poore was the only member to vote against the fees. Richard Hubbell, who originally voted against the fees when they were implemented last month, changed his vote Tuesday, saying the school system couldn't afford to subsidize the busing.

Chairman Christopher Outwin and committeewoman Susan Jenkins voted to keep the fees. Newly appointed member Clifford Scott was out of town.

So far the administration has collected $78,500 from the fees. It has commitments from about 28 more would-be riders, who could bring in almost $20,000 more.

"For $75,000 (the fee) is the worst decision I've seen the School Committee make since I've been on it," Ms. Poore said.

Here is the impact of the fees:

- There are 23 buses contracted, down six from last year.

Town boards fill vacant School Committee seat

By Lisa Boudreau

Clifford Scott, of 11 High St., is the newest member of the School Committee. He was chosen at a joint meeting of the School Committee and Board of Selectmen Monday night.

Mr. Scott was chosen over five other candidates vying for the seat that was left vacant last month when committee Chairman Andres Salazar resigned to take a job in Florida.

The five other candidates were Debra Silberstein, Joanne Marden, Richard Gropper, Ray Scheer and Mary Lyman.

Only Mr. Scott, Ms. Silberstein and Ms. Marden were nominated to be finalists after candidate interviews held last week and Monday night.

"We got to know Cliff Scott during the search process to find a new superintendent this spring," said School Committee Chairman Christopher Outwin.

Converting an abandoned mill into a shopping center. Starting a new company. Buying a condominium in Florida. A trip around the world.

Dee and Kingman Webster, ages 56 and 58 respectively, considered each of these investment and lifestyle options when Mr. Webster sold the family business and cut back on his work activities two years ago.

"We looked at all the traditional forms of retirement and concluded that they had little meaning to us," said Mr. Webster, of 5 Tamys Lane.

"We agreed that we wanted to do something together that would make a difference, and that we wanted to be involved directly, not just as financial benefactors. The more we thought about it, the more it became clear that the area of greatest need in our nation is the education of inner-city children."

Thus, a project called "I Have a Dream - Lawrence" was born.

More than 100 participated with Rex and Rita

The Andover Townsman ran a 10-week Family Reading Challenge this summer. Children between the ages of 5 and 12 completed reading assignments each week and then entered a drawing. Three readers each week won T-shirts from the drawing and their photos were published in the paper.

Now, the Townsman is sending the names into the national Family Reading Challenge contest. Prizes in that contest include a computer for the winner, as well as a computer for the winner's school.

Scores of young readers did the contest.

"We were pleased so many children participated," said Perry Catlin, Townsman editor. "It was such a successful program that we will run it again, next summer. In addition, we have plans to begin another program in the Townsman this fall, for students. The goal of this program will be the same as the Rex and Rita program: to encourage students to read. It also will encourage students to write."

The Townsman will announce its new reading program soon, said Ms. Catlin.

NEWS IN BRIEF

DCS to hold registration

Registration for the DCS fall programs begins Thursday, Sept. 19, at the Doherty Middle School auditorium from 7 to 8 p.m.

Booklets are mailed the first week of September to all Andover registered voters. Those not on the mailing list can find booklets at Memorial Hall Library and the DCS office on Bartlet Street.

Priority will be given to those at evening registration. Forms received by mail or in person at the office will not be counted until Friday, Sept. 20. Registration will continue at the town offices until classes are filled. No phone registrations will be accepted.

T fare increase is smaller than first planned

Passengers will pay a smaller fare increase than originally proposed for their ride on the T, the MBTA announced. Subway fares, initially recommended to go from 75 cents to $1 will be raised to 85 cents, and bus fares will increase just 10 cents, from 50 cents to 60 cents.

The fare increase will raise an estimated $15.5 million. The across-the-board increase is a compromise developed in response to concerns raised by the MBTA advisory board, comprised of representatives of the 78 cities and towns in the T district.

Both the MBTA board of directors and MBTA advisory board voted to approve the new fare structure at separate meetings.

Cash fares will go up starting Sept. 3. The cost of the monthly pass will increase in October. Highlights of the increase call for:

- Local bus fares to go from 50 to 60 cents;
- Subway fares from 75 to 85 cents;
- Commuter rail fares will increase by anywhere from 10 to 50 cents depending on the zone;
- Express bus fares by 25 to 35 cents;
- Senior citizens and disabled passengers will be asked to pay 25 percent of the full bus fare (15 cents) and subway fare (20 cents) and 50 percent of fares for express bus and commuter rail service.

Prices for monthly passes have been reduced from original fare hike proposals to provide an incentive to passengers to continue to ride the T and encourage more people to become regular T riders. New pass prices include:

- Local bus monthly pass will increase from $18 to $20;
- Subway monthly pass will not change. It will remain at $27;
- Combo bus/subway monthly pass will increase from $40 to $46;
- Combo plus, bus/subway monthly pass will not change. It will remain at $48;
- Ten-ride tickets for Express Bus Zone I will be offered for the first time for $13.50; the Green Line and Express Bus II will increase from $16.50 to $17; and Express Bus III will increase from $18 to $20.

The T board of directors approved a fare increase on July 18 that would have brought subway fares to $1, with a discount equivalent to a fare of 83 cents when five tokens were purchased at the same time. That plan was reviewed by the MBTA advisory board's executive committee, which asked the T to take another look at the proposed subway fares with an eye toward reducing the amount of the increase.

"Both fare plans have their advantages," said James E. Rooney, the T's acting general manager. "We are responding to the advisory board's request to reduce the amount of the increase."

"Most folks don't realize that fares cover only about a third of the cost of their trip. This increase does a good job at walking the fine line between our need to increase revenue and our passengers' ability to pay."

Following the Sept. 3 increase, the T will continue to offer one of the lowest basic fares of any major transit system in the country, Mr. Rooney said.

For information on routes and schedules, call the T's customer service center at (617) 722-3200.

DCS winds down playgrounds

The Department of Community Services ended another season of its drop-in-playgrounds this month. Here's a look back at the last few weeks from the counselors.

South Elementary School

The heat and humidity of week four kept many regulars home. Those who braved the hot weather started off the week with a basketball game. The future NBA stars included Andy Edge, Steve Cavanaugh, Peter Marino, Andrea Martin and Mary Cassidy.

Sophie Eustis, Tiffany Gentile and Matt Garrity were a few of the campers who wanted to stay cool in the classroom creating pictures with Styrofoam and paint.

Making gingerbread houses was the craft of one day. Mike Cavanaugh, Matt Cherniki and Laura Rodgers had a ball building and eating their houses of graham crackers and candy. Later, campers played shipwreck in the gym. The surviving sailors of the grueling game were Maddy Eustis and James Sibelle.

The hot sunny weather continued for a field trip to Wingaersheek Beach. The Sibelles, Cavanaughs, Chris Farr and Brian Froburg had a great time swimming, walking along the rocks and collecting seashells.

Come As You Are Day got everyone out of bed and off to the playground in their pajamas. Everyone enjoyed munchkins from Dunkin Donuts.

The heat became unbearable, so most of the day was spent playing Dead Dog. In a championship game, there was a three-way tie between Paul Sibelle, Mike Beliveau and Pat Garrity.

West Elementary School

The kids spent the last few weeks taking shelter from the hot and muggy weather. Jessica Smith, Shannon Houlihan, Chrissy Bevacqua and Pam Schardin wore terrific costumes on Halloween Day.

Sean Corey, Keith Espinola and Steve Crossley had a terrific time jumping off rocks at Wingaersheek Beach, while Lisa

COOKING

By Maria Moskos

There probably is no other vegetable as mistreated as a zucchini.

In the summertime I have seen them stuffed into people's mailboxes, left by the side of the road in boxes with signs that say "Free - take one" and doomed to shrivel on vines in family gardens.

They can reach such enormous sizes they could be classified inedible because of the resulting dry, airy texture, huge seeds and tough skin.

I choose zucchini that are usually about 8 inches long and 1 1/2 inches in diameter. I almost always leave the skin intact except for bruised areas, which I remove along with both ends.

Except for baking or frying, I always use a steamer to retain their crispness and prevent their becoming waterlogged.

Because zucchini are so prolific, easy to grow and inexpensive to buy, they're the main ingredient in many recipes, including the popular zucchini bread, cake and muffins.

Zucchini blossom soup

Serves four

Zucchini blossoms should be gathered early in the morning while they are fully open to avoid depleting the crop in your home garden. Gather only male blossoms, which appear at the end of a slender green stalk (unlike the female blossoms, which have a bulge beneath the bloom that eventually becomes the zucchini).

Place blossoms in a bowl of water, cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate until ready to use that day.

If you don't have zucchini growing in your garden, you may purchase them at specialty grocery stores or farmers' markets.

4 tbsp. butter

1 medium onion, coarsely chopped

12 squash blossoms

2 cups chicken broth

2 cups light cream

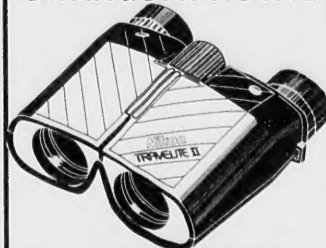

Salt, pepper to taste

4 squash blossoms for garnish

Ways to cope with zucchini's bounty

Saute onion and blossoms in pot over medium heat until onion is clear, blossoms close and stems are tender (about five minutes).

Puree in a processor or food mill. Return to pot and stir in broth and cream. Raise to a simmer without boiling and add salt and pepper in a limited amount.

Serve immediately with a whole squash blossom floating on top of each bowl of soup.

Zucchini and elephant garlic

Serves three to four
1 tbsp. peanut oil
1 lb. small zucchini, washed and cut in 1/8-inch slices (ends removed)
1 large elephant garlic clove, peeled and sliced paper thin
2 tbsp. red wine vinegar
2 tbsp. soy sauce
1/4 tsp. hot chili oil
1/4 cup water

Heat oil to smoking in a wok or skillet and stir fry zucchini and garlic for two minutes. Add vinegar, soy sauce, chili oil and water. Cover. Reduce heat and steam until zucchini are cooked and liquid is reduced to two or three tablespoons (about 10 minutes). Serve hot or room temperature.

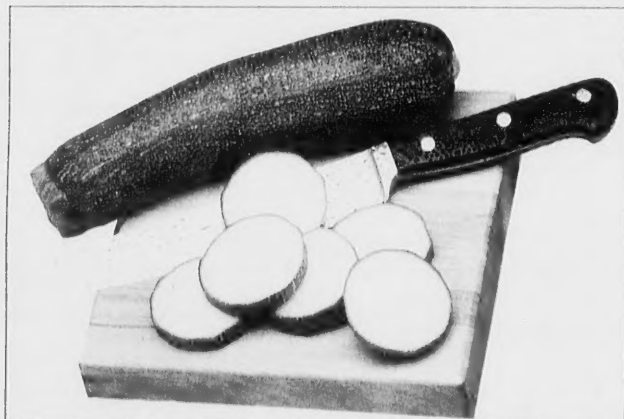

Mushrooms stuffed with zucchini and tomatoes

2 tbsp. olive oil
16 large mushrooms (about 2 1/2 inches in diameter)
1 medium zucchini (about 8 inches by 1 1/2 inches)
6 sun-dried tomatoes
3 shallots
1 clove garlic
1/4 cup Pecorino cheese
12 fresh basil leaves
1 1/2 tsp. dry oregano
3 tbsp. white wine
1/3 cup bread crumbs moistened with olive oil and 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Coat washed mushroom caps inside and out with olive oil and arrange in lightly oiled baking dish.

Finely chop zucchini, tomatoes, shallots and garlic. Saute in a skillet over medium heat until onion is clear. Remove from heat. Combine with cheese and herbs and place a spoonful of filling in each mushroom cap.

Add white wine to pan and cook over medium heat, stirring until wine combines with pan drippings and reduces by half. Pour over mushroom caps and top with bread crumbs. Bake 15 minutes. Serve hot.

School considers future expansion

The Massachusetts School of Law recently opened a new facility at 50 Federal St., off River Road.

The new building, in a wooded setting, houses 60,000 square feet of classroom, library and office space - approximately three times more area than the first campus at Dundee Park, according to Peter Malaguti, a professor at the school.

The library area is large enough to accommodate more than 100,000 hard volumes of law books, with room to spare for "a substantial computerized/electronic library," Mr. Malaguti said.

The school has plans to open an additional 30,000 square feet in the building within the next two to four years, he added.

The Massachusetts School of Law, which opened three years ago with 95 students and three full-time faculty members, now has a student body of about 600.

Ten full-time faculty and approximately 50 adjunct faculty teach class.

Graduates may sit for the Massachusetts bar examination given twice a year.

The school will conduct an open house on Thursday, Sept. 5, at 7:30 p.m.

BUSINESS

Dyonics president Charles Federico and Hooks Johnston, vice president of manufacturing, display some of the medical equipment the Andover company's 400 employees make.

Firm's business is up 40 percent in a year

By Don Staruk

One of Andover's quietest success stories may be a company that saw a 40 percent growth in business last year and is 40 percent ahead again this year.

Smith & Nephew Dyonics Inc., at 160 Dascomb Road, is a leader in the manufacture of arthroscopic surgical equipment and instrumentation, according to company personnel. The company employs 400 people in Andover and has been here since 1980.

But when an executive recruiter last year approached Hooks Johnston, of 26 Morton St., regarding a job at the company, Mr. Johnston, an 11-year resident, had never heard of Dyonics.

"It was the best-kept secret in Andover," Mr. Johnston said. "It still is."

Mr. Johnston took the job as vice president of manufacturing and hasn't looked back. Neither has the company.

Charlie Federico, of Westford, has been president of Dyonics since 1985, around the time a slow period in business ended and the company's steady growth began. Mr. Federico said the company now has twice the market share of its closest competitor.

"Some companies are doing well. We're doing well with local technology, local people and working with technology that we understand," Mr. Federico said. "We are a very successful American company that has defeated the foreign competitors."

"We are competing with the Japanese and the Germans" and beating them, he said.

Lights, cameras, blades

Dyonics makes equipment for arthroscopic, or "non-invasive" surgery.

Using fiberoptics, the company makes lights and cameras that enable doctors to look inside an athlete's knee or shoulder and determine the nature and extent of injuries without having to cut open the joint. They also make the tools for doctors to go into a knee through a small hole and remove the loose cartilage, bone spurs or scar tissue without doing a lot of unnecessary damage to surrounding tissue.

These procedures prevent needless scarring, often allow use of local anesthesia and reduce recovery time, according to company personnel.

"There's less trauma to the patient," Mr. Johnston said.

Dyonics employees every month design, build, test and ship 60,000 to 70,000 cutting blades, all smaller than a straw. Other arthroscopic tools manufactured include saws, bone grinders and an array of instruments for poking, prodding, pushing and pulling tissue during surgery, and which any mechanic would be glad to have in a tool box.

The company also builds the electronic controls for tools and the video equipment that attaches to the fiberoptics and allows surgeons to view an operation from the inside while it is being performed.

History of the firm

Dyonics was founded in Woburn in 1969 as a producer of fiberoptic illumination for underwater photography, according to Mr. Federico. The technology just moved the company in a different direction.

"What we do today is look inside the joints that are extended with saline - salt water," Mr. Federico said. "There is a thread of similarity."

Hammy kids get a chance to act up

You'll forgive West Elementary School teacher Josie Walker if she seems a little tired Sept. 7.

Besides starting a new school year as West's music teacher, Ms. Walker will be auditioning youngsters for the two local youth theater groups she directs Sept. 5 and Sept. 6.

The double auditioning makes it tough on the director, she said, but gives talented kids a chance to find out about both opportunities.

Both Confetti Kids and the Merrimack Junior Theatre are looking for young people to sing, dance and act in their productions.

Ms. Walker will hold auditions for Confetti Kids, which is administered through the Department of Community Services, Friday, Sept. 6, at 3:30 p.m. in the West Elementary School auditorium on Beacon Street.

Membership is for children in the Merrimack Valley area in grades three through nine.

Confetti Kids meet Thursdays from 3:15 to 4:30 p.m. at West Elementary School. Classes are designed to develop musical and dramatic skills through songs, skits and pantomime, Ms. Walker said. The troupe frequently performs at local events.

Her other group, the Merrimack Junior Theatre, will hold auditions for second- through sixth-graders for its fall musical production of Robin Hood.

Auditions will be held two days, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 5 and 6, from 6:15 to 8:45 p.m. in the Doherty Middle School auditorium on Bartlet Street. The production is slated for Nov. 15, 16 and 17.

Children should bring a non-returnable, recent snapshot of themselves.

"Merrimack Junior Theatre is a child-centered theater," Ms. Walker said. "It's another opportunity to grow. Some kids need to grow and go through team sports like soccer and baseball."

At both the Robin Hood and Confetti Kids auditions, young actors should come prepared to perform a simple monologue such as a nursery rhyme, poem or dramatic interpretation.

They will also be asked to sing a few lines from either "Twinkle Twinkle Little Star" or "America" ("My Country 'Tis of Thee").

Children must be accompanied by an adult at the auditions.

"We're looking for kids who are gutsy and willing to take direction. And they have to sing on pitch."

"But those who do not get in shouldn't give up," Ms. Walker added. After all, there's always next year.

For more information, call Ms. Walker at 475-8261.

Algebra doesn't scare this student

Kevin Foltz of Andover was among 67 high school students from 22 states who recently completed the Program in Mathematics for Young Scientists at Boston University. He was chosen to be a PROMYS scholar by a panel of mathematicians from the Boston area.

Mr. Foltz, son of Jim and Kay Foltz of Countryside Way, will be a junior at Andover High School this fall.

During the six-week program, he attended daily classes in number theory and algebra, worked on daily problem sets and participated in group tutorials with specially chosen counselors. They lived in campus housing and visited the Boston Museum of Science and Draper Laboratories in Cambridge.

PROMYS is based on a 32-year-old Ohio State University program begun by mathematician Arnold Ross to meet the challenge of the Sputnik era. The only program of its kind outside Ohio State University, PROMYS at Boston University is designed to provide "a vivid apprenticeship to a life of scientific exploration," said spokeswoman Jennifer Brett.

It is funded by the National Science Foundation Young Scholars Program.

Waste Not

Local kids make good use of business throwaways

Teachers can find classroom supplies for the housekeeping corner, science table, art area and block corner - all for $5 a bag. Or, if they can't find math manipulatives or reading charts to support their curricula, they don't have to look too far.

The Creative Resource Center, 439 Haverhill St. in Lawrence, has a warehouse full of business-donated materials for inventive teachers and their students.

Materials from the Resource Center, which opened in April, have been transformed into costumes for parades, games for carnivals, sensory stimuli for the retarded, props for plays, presents for parents and science projects, among other things.

The CRC collects materials industries and businesses would otherwise throw away, and director Jack Fascione sorts and displays these materials for teachers and students.

Mr. Fascione designed the center's layout and built its shelving.

Jenny Williams visits the Creative Resource Center to create art out of the "junk" a local business would have thrown away.

Last spring he designed the props for a bullfight for an eighth-grade school play while the teacher was at the center. Mr. Fascione is supported by a board of directors and volunteers from the Essex County Association for the Education of Young Children.

Since opening, the Resource Center moved to the warehouse building behind the garage it first occupied. The address is the same, but the facility is twice the size with room for expansion, according to Mr. Fascione. The group is looking for a non-profit business to share the upstairs office space, he added.

"We did not realize how much material we had amassed until we decided to move it," said Mr. Fascione, who designed the original center to be totally movable - walls and all. Many of those walls are now display tables.

"Thanks to some wonder teens and friends with trucks, we accomplished

Students attending West Middle and Bancroft Elementary schools will be greeted by a new principal this fall. Those at the high school will see a familiar face with a new title. Andover's three new principals and superintendent are poised on the brink of their first full school year in their new jobs. Getting together at a reception in their honor are, from left, Samuel Campell of West Middle School, Tim Thomas of Andover High, Superintendent of Schools Mark McQuillan and Debra Dunn of Bancroft Elementary. Mr. Thomas, the school's assistant principal for the past four years, replaces Wilbur Hixon, who retired this year. Mr. Campbell, who succeeds retiree William Hart, was a school administrator in Virginia. Debra Dunn is also taking over the desk of a retiring principal, Iora Alexander. Ms. Dunn was an elementary school principal in Chelmsford.

Andoverites study abroad

Two Andover students will continue their studies overseas this fall.

Amy Kiley will spend the semester in Wales through the International Studies Program conducted there by Central College.

Ms. Kiley, a student at Vermont College/Norwich University in Montpelier, Vt., will follow a liberal-arts curriculum at Trinity College in Carmarthen.

Wales is one of three international program sites Central has established for students who want to experience another culture but who do not know a second language. Other English-language programs are based in London and Yucatan, Mexico.

Theodore A. Lee, a junior economics major at Union College in Schenectady, N.Y., will be in Italy under Union's term abroad program.

A 1989 graduate of Deerfield Academy, Mr. Lee is the son of Sherwood and Barbara Lee of 2 Olympia Way.

The CRC hopes to run in-services programs and workshops. It will host the fall workshop for the Essex County Association for the Education of Young Children Sunday, Sept. 22.

Association members who join the Creative Resource Center that day will receive a 20 percent discount on their memberships.

The CRC will also host a workshop for the Childcare Circuit in October. Teachers may call the center to schedule class field trips.

Despite the professional workshops, Mr. Fascione said, "we always want to keep ourselves focused on the most important reason for the center: Children."

"We are here to give children more opportunities to experience hands-on learning. When children can do for themselves and see what they have done, their self-esteem is enhanced and they come to the next learning experience with eagerness and openness, ready to continue the learning process."

The Association for the Education of Young Children recently participated in a charity shopping day at the newly opened Filene's in Salem, N.H. Not all the proceeds are in, but the association raised more than $500 for CRC in direct ticket sales.

The Creative Resource Center also accepts tax-deductible contributions, which should be mailed to 439 Haverhill St., Lawrence 01841.

Traditional slecht services will be held Saturday, Aug. 31, at 9 p.m.

Rosh Hashana services will begin Sunday, Sept. 8, at 6:45 p.m. and continue Monday, Sept. 9, at 9 a.m. with an evening service Monday, Sept. 9, at 6:45 p.m. Services on Tuesday, Sept. 10, begin at 9 a.m.

Yom Kippur services begin with Kol Nidre, Sept. 17, at 6:30 p.m. and services begin Sept. 18 at 9 a.m. The Yizkor (memorial) service begins at approximately 11:30 a.m. The remaining three segments of the service mincha, neilah and shofer, begin at 5, 6 and 7:30 p.m., respectively.

Baptist church begins fall Sunday School season

Andover Baptist Church will begin its fall Sunday School season with a potluck supper and a visit from Grace and Peace clown ministry. The event is scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 7, at 6 p.m.

Grace and Peace Creative Ministries features two American Baptist Church pastors, Ivy Merrill from Norwich, N.Y., and Mark Ferrin, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Framingham. Between them they have more than 15 years of "serious clowning experience." They say they pack the message of God's love in humor.

Families and individuals interested in knowing more about Andover Baptist's Sunday School program are invited. The church has classes for 3-year-olds to adults, meeting at 9:30 a.m. on Sundays. For more information and reservations, call the church at 475-0166. There is no charge.

Rev. Merrill has served as interim pastor for several churches and been involved in youth ministries, including Youth Conference at Oceanwood, Maine, where she served as chaplain and faculty member. She graduated from Roberts Wesleyan with a bachelor of arts and from Eastern Baptist Seminary with a master of divinity in 1982. She has been performing drama for 20 years.

Rev. Ferrin is a part-time teacher and Protestant chaplain at Framingham State College. He graduated from Barrington College with a bachelor of arts in English and Bible in 1972 and from Andover Newton Theological School with a master of divinity in 1982.

Tsongas' fund-raiser cuts hours

By Don Staruk

Andover's Nicholas A. Rizzo Jr. has stepped aside as a full-time fund-raiser for Paul Tsongas' presidential campaign, saying that he has fulfilled his obligations and doesn't have the energy to make the run for the White House.

"The job is so demanding in the way of time and in the way of energy that I don't think I could physically do the job and do it right," Mr. Rizzo said this week. "I did it in '79 and '80 for Carter, but I was 10 years younger."

"I had told (Mr. Tsongas) I would stay with him through the first reporting quarter or until we qualified" for matching federal funds, Mr. Rizzo said.

Candidates must raise at least $5,000 from a minimum of 20 individual donors in each of 20 states to qualify for the federal funds. The first reporting quarter for candidates ended June 30, but it took until Aug. 10 to finish qualifying for matching funds, according to Mr. Rizzo.

"It's a tough, tough job," he said. "It's a young person's job. It's travel, eating junk food and living on airplanes."

His duties were taken over by Beth Cataldo, a former fund-raiser for Massachusetts gubernatorial candidate John Silber. Ms. Cataldo was appointed campaign finance director.

ue to work part time for Mr. Tsongas, the only Democratic candidate in the race so far. He said Mr. Tsongas is "doing fabulous."

"I will help in anyway I can, but it will not be a full-time effort," he said.

Mr. Rizzo said he will concentrate on his business, Spenco Inc., a consulting and marketing company for multi-family real estate investments, and tend to his large garden.

Library hours highlight warrant

By Don Staruk

Memorial Hall Library will be open on Sundays this school year as long as a transfer of funds is approved at September's Town Meeting.

One of 10 articles on the Sept. 30 Town Meeting warrant asks to transfer $14,500 in the library budget from "other expenses" to "personal services."

"That is to accommodate for Sundays," said Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski.

This adjustment, and other savings in the department, will allow the library to open Sundays October through at least May, according to the town manager.

"That is hopefully in keeping with the intent of the vote" at April Town Meeting, Mr. Stapczynski said this week.

Town Meeting in April voted to keep the library open on Sundays, contrary to plans in the budget that would have closed it for lack of funds.

Town Meeting is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 30, at 7 p.m., in the J. Everett Collins Center. The last day to register to vote at the meeting is Sept. 20.

Some of the other articles in the warrant so far propose to:

- Cut the budget approved at April Town Meeting by $670,000 due to reduced state aid.

- Reject Gov. William Weld's teacher salary deferral plan, which would defer 1/12 the cost of teachers' salaries, for each of the next two years, to a subsequent year.

- Amend the zoning bylaws to be more liberal in allowing yard and garage sales and cottage industries.

- Amend the bylaw to allow mausoleums in cemeteries.

- Amend the zoning bylaw to allow one unregistered car on a property.

Town clerk's assistant moves upstairs

Sandra Cassano, assistant to the town clerk for the past year, started a new job Tuesday as executive secretary to Buzz Stapczynski, town manager.

"I've only been here a day, but the first day was quiet. I'm looking forward to the challenges," Ms. Cassano said Wednesday.

Ms. Cassano, of Atkinson,

N.H., worked as a secretary in the Timberlane school district in Plaistow, N.H., before taking a secretarial position in Andover's Planning Department in 1986.

She moved to the town clerk's office in 1989 and became assistant to the clerk in December.

Ms. Cassano and her husband, Mike, have two sons.

The Websters are making a difference

Starting the first day of the new school year, the Websters, through this program, will work one to one with about 60 students who will comprise two classrooms of the sixth grade at the Arlington School, an elementary/middle school situated just off Broadway in Lawrence. The neighborhood surrounding the school is one of the poorest in the city.

With help from two bilingual coordinators, tutors, volunteer mentors, counselors and other resources, the Websters will endeavor to add significantly to the chances that these 60 children will graduate from high school and go on to college or a career of their choice.

The Websters hope that "I Have a Dream - Lawrence" will dramatically increase the number who will finish high school and go to college. In the most recent year for which statistics are available, only 4 percent of the students who had attended Arlington School graduated from high school, and only 2 percent went on with further education.

Support from I Have a Dream will not end when its dreamers have earned a high school diploma. For those who want to further their education, the program will help them locate scholarships, grants and loans and provide the supplemental funding to help ensure that the tuition cost to attend the college of their choice will not deter them from enrolling and earning a degree.

The program will be prepared to supplement the students' other financial entitlements for four years up to the amount of the tuition that is then charged by the University of Massachusetts at Amherst to residents of this state.

The Websters have established a foundation in the name of "I Have a Dream - Lawrence" to cover all costs associated with fulfilling their promises to participating students.

"Our aim will be to work in concert with parents, teachers, other schools and the Greater Lawrence community to provide each of these dreamers with a path toward the best possible life for them," says Mrs. Webster.

"Along the way we expect that there will be as many moments of doubt as of joy for all involved, but we are certain as we start that the potential reward will be worth the effort," she says.

"Our fondest hope is that all who are touched by this program will benefit. To us, that group ranges from the children who will be directly involved in the I Have a Dream program to the children with whom they will come in contact over the years, and to other adults who get involved themselves."

Though the program will directly assist only about 5 percent of the approximately 1,200 students enrolled this fall at the Arlington School, Principal William Carey wholeheartedly endorses its arrival.

"To me, the great benefit to be derived from the presence of the I Have a Dream program is the powerful new link that has been established, through the Websters, between our school and the more privileged world outside this community," he says.

Kingman and Dee Webster of Tamys Lane aren't your ordinary retirees. The couple have decided to help 60 sixth-graders at Arlington School in Lawrence finish high school and go on to college.

"It would be wonderful if all inner-city children could be afforded the same opportunity to succeed as children of parents of greater means.

"I Have a Dream is a tremendous asset in this regard, I believe, because the commitment is direct, personal and is focused right from the start on goals which are attainable," he says.

The Lawrence project is the third I Have a Dream program to be established in Massachusetts - the others are in Springfield and Boston - and the 141st program to be established in 30 cities nationwide. More than 10,000 students are currently participating in these programs.

Each new program has been inspired by the original, which was established in 1981 by New York businessman Eugene Lang, who blurted out the basic promise of I Have a Dream in a now celebrated commencement address to 61 youngsters graduating from the sixth grade of the East Harlem elementary school he had attended as a boy.

At that time, it was expected that fewer than 25 percent in that class would graduate from high school, and that far fewer would attend college. Ten years later, more than 90 percent of the original class of dreamers has earned a high school diploma and more than two-thirds have continued their education.

Of the 61 in Mr. Lang's class, only a small percentage did not use English as their primary language, and 61 percent passed all three basic skills tests. Of the approximately 60 students in the I Have a Dream - Lawrence program about 85 percent are Hispanic. Because these students have some difficulty reading tests that are written in English, only 27 percent of the students in the Lawrence schools pass the ninth-grade basic skills test, presenting the Websters with perhaps an even more daunting challenge than the one Eugene Lang faced.

The Websters recognize that challenge, but believe that the extraordinarily low test scores are attributable largely to the language difficulty, and are not reflective of the basic intelligence these students possess.

The Websters have ties to Lawrence that date back to 1858 when Mr. Webster's great-grandfather came to Lawrence. In fact, Mr. Webster's grandfather lived most of his married life on Wyman Street, which is located in the Arlington district of Lawrence, and his father attended the Arlington School.

The family business, Blue Seal Feeds, was founded in Lawrence in 1868 and remains headquartered less than a 15-minute walk from the Arlington School.

Mr. Webster is a native of Andover who attended its public schools and Worcester Polytechnic Institute. He worked for Blue Seal Feeds for 35 years, the last 17 as executive vice president and treasurer, commuting daily through the Arlington School neighborhood.

During his tenure the company grew from two manufacturing plants in two states to eight plants in four states. The company was sold in 1988, leading to Mr. Webster's decision to retire from active involvement.

Mrs. Webster was born in Bethlehem, Pa. She attended public schools there, as well as Syracuse University. She has been an active participant as a volunteer in a litany of philanthropic and civic affairs in Greater Lawrence since she met and married Mr. Webster in 1959.

The Websters are the parents of three grown daughters: Allison, Kristen and Susan. Kristen, a graphic designer by profession, created the "I Have a Dream - Lawrence" logo that depicts a young person standing on three books reaching up to a star.

As their project takes shape, the Websters have been watching the restoration of the Ayer Mill clock in Lawrence, one of the tallest sites in the city. The restoration has been funded to this point through private gifts.

The Websters plan to contribute to this fund in the name of "I Have a Dream - Lawrence." Their wish is that their dreamers will look to this clock throughout the years, likening its soaring majesty to their own aspirations.

Support from 'I Have a Dream' will not end when the students earn their high school diplomas. For those who want to go on, the program will help them locate scholarships and loans and provide supplemental funding so that the cost of tuition will not deter them from enrolling. The program will also grant other financial entitlements for four years up to the amount of the tuition then charged by UMass-Amherst.

Latvian-American looks tensely toward homeland

sachusetts, where he has continued his fight for the Baltic states' independence from the Soviet Union.

Events in the Soviet Union during the past week have lifted Mr. Mangulis' spirits. A military coup that nearly toppled democratic reforms failed; eight of the Soviet Union's 15 republics announced their independence; and half a dozen Western nations have begun forming diplomatic ties with the Baltic states, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

"(Latvians) are very optimistic independence is near," Mr. Mangulis said.

His fight has not been without hardships. He lost many friends during battles against the Soviet army, and part of his left hand had to be amputated when he was shot by a Russian machine gun.

Because the Soviets closed the borders, his younger sister and brother were left behind in Latvia when he escaped. Mr. Mangulis returned to his homeland last year with a Latvian-American singing group to participate in folk music competitions with other Latvians who had been living outside their country. He had a chance to get reacquainted with his family while he was there.

In 1939 Soviet Premier Joseph Stalin signed a secret pact with Nazi leader Adolf Hitler to annex the Baltics to the Soviet Union. In June of the following year the Soviet army invaded Mr. Mangulis' homeland and the other two Baltic states, Lithuania and Estonia. The Baltic states had been independent during the time between the two world wars.

Thousands of tanks and armored trucks filled with Soviet soldiers invaded Latvian towns and cities, Mr. Mangulis said.

They took over government buildings and randomly searched homes looking for resisters, he said.

At that time Mr. Mangulis was 19 years old. He had just finished high school and was about to begin studies at an engineering school in his hometown of Cesis.

"Like all the patriotic Latvian boys I joined the freedom fighters," Mr. Mangulis said.

Their job was to observe what was going on and report back all that they heard and saw to the underground resistance.

"We worked in groups of three. We never knew more than two people we worked with. In case we were arrested they could never get more information than that from us," he said.

There were a few instances when soldiers and Communist officials went to Mr. Mangulis' school looking for resisters. He and some of his friends were called to be questioned on their activities.

"We knew what to expect, and we were very careful when they questioned us," he said.

Mr. Mangulis said he and the other men in the underground has been warned about KGB and secret police interrogation techniques.

"They took me into a separate room and asked me what I knew about the uprising. When I told them, 'Sorry, I cannot help you. I do not know anything,' they pulled out a gun and held it to my head," he said.

"I was just lucky. They let me go," Mr. Mangulis said.

Two of his high school friends weren't as lucky. They were captured, and Mr. Mangulis and other freedom fighters found the young men in the woods two days later. Their tongues had been cut out, their ears cut off and their throats slit, he said.

In the spring of 1943 Mr. Mangulis entered the Latvian Legion and began training in radio communications and codes. After three months of training he was sent to the Russian front as a radio man and his duties were to keep the legion divisions in contact with their superiors.

One year later his division was almost completely wiped out. He was sent to the rear of the fighting to train new recruits to be radio men.

At Christmas time in 1944 he was sent back to the front to be a radio man for another Latvian Legion division.

In October, 1945 his division was overwhelmed by the Soviet army. He packed his radio station on a horse-drawn wagon and began retreating with the rest of his division. The wagon and radio equipment were lost when they fell through thin ice.

"Then I became a regular soldier. I and five men left in the division continued to fight as we retreated," he said.

It was during this battle that Mr. Mangulis' left hand was shot. He was taken to a hospital in Germany where he stayed for a short while until the Americans and British liberated that country.

When he was well enough, he moved into a Latvian camp in Germany.

At that time there were about 600 refugees from the Baltic states living in exile in Germany, he said. The Americans and British did not force them to return behind the Iron Curtain where many feared they would be killed for collaborating against the Soviet Union.

It was there he met his wife, Elisabeth, another Latvian refugee. "She escaped the Russians and went to Germany. It was a miracle that we met."

In Germany Mr. Mangulis studied architecture and began a career in building and design. In 1951 he and his wife were sponsored by a Lithuanian Lutheran minister in Boston and they moved to the United States.

"When I came into Boston it was at night by car from the airport in New York. I never imagined there could be so much traffic. I thought to myself, 'How can people drive like this?'" he said of his first impressions.

He quickly found a job with a Boston architectural firm, and his wife settled into life in America. The Mangulises remain very active in the Latvian church in Boston.

"They took me into a separate room and asked me what I knew about the uprising. When I told them, 'Sorry, I cannot help you. I do not know anything,' they pulled out a gun and held it to my head."

Akselis Mangulis, a former Latvian freedom fighter

This map was taken from a sign Akselis Mangulis carries in demonstrations for Latvian independence.

"It is very important for Latvians and Latvian-Americans to be able to hear God's gospel in the Latvian language," he said.

Mr. Mangulis has been very active on the political front, keeping pressure on the United States government to recognize the right of the Baltic states to be free. He is the state chairman of the Latvian-American Republican National Federation and has been invited to both the Reagan and Bush inaugurations.

Mr. and Mrs. Mangulis have two daughters, Ingrid Raudzens, an art history professor at Salem State College, and Silvija Aprans, who works at DeWolfe Realtors in Andover.

"Everything worked out beautifully in the United States for us," their father said. "Now I keep my fingers crossed. The young people in Latvia now know what democracy means. Now there is no way back to communism."

The aftermath of Hurricane Bob became evident the day after as residents emerged from their homes and tried making their way through town. But Andover may get federal funds to help it clean up.

Hurricane could cost $300k

By Don Staruk

The final bill for cleanup from Hurricane Bob in Andover could hit $300,000, Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski said Tuesday.

But the town may be able to get at least part of that back since President Bush has declared Essex County a disaster area.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency could pick up 75 percent of the costs associated with Hurricane Bob, and the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency might pick up the other 25 percent, according to Mr. Stapczynski.

Town and state officials will work with FEMA in coming weeks to determine the town's eligibility for reimbursement.

Mr. Stapczynski told the Board of Selectmen Monday night that damages to private and public property and cleanup costs, as of last week, would probably hit $200,000. But he revised that figure on Tuesday.

"Upon further review, the $200,000 might have been a bit conservative," Mr. Stapczynski said.

The town manager, who was on Cape Cod on vacation during the hurricane, expressed his appreciation for a job well done by town officials and employees during the storm.

"We have a tree division that did a heck of a job and will still be out a while, as will the highway crew," Mr. Stapczynski said.

Selectmen asked that a commendation be given to several department heads in recognition of their special efforts.

Mr. Stapczynski said some cleanup may have to be put on hold while town employees concentrate on getting fields and buildings ready for the school year.

Landfill open for mess Bob made

The town landfill on Chandler Road will open limited hours this week and next so residents can drop off debris left behind by Hurricane Bob.

The landfill will accept only trees, brush and leaves.

The hours will be Tuesday and both Thursdays from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. and noon to 1 p.m., and Saturdays, 8:30 to 4 p.m.

Response by residents using the landfill last Saturday was "overwhelming," according to Buzz Stapczynski, town manager. He told selectmen Monday night that he would wait and see how the next two weeks went before deciding whether the landfill needed to be open longer or if a street-by-street collection is necessary.

Parents' opposition doesn't stop bus fees

- More than 125 people who have signed up for busing have not paid.

- At least 11 walkers will have to cross Route 125.

- At least 60 families within the two-mile limit have more than two children.

- The administration expects to add half a dozen more crossing guards because of the increase in walkers this year.

Parents speak out

Several parents in the audience voiced opposition to the fees. Most told the committee the fee didn't take into consideration the safety of Andover's children.

Don Roy of 10 Dean Circle said he and his wife moved to town 10 years ago so their three children could receive a quality, safe education. He said the committee is holding a gun against parents' heads to pay the fee, because it knows parents won't allow their children to be jeopardized by unsafe walking conditions.

"I have three children at the Sanborn School, and now you're asking me to weigh my family's safety against financial considerations, and you people know what will win out," he said. "Of course I'll pay your fee to ensure the safety of my children."

As the debate continued, a few parents in the audience spoke without being recognized by the committee, charging the committee was remiss in not guaranteeing children's safety.

Lisa Hurley of Osgood Street has three kids ranging in age from 5 to 9. She said they will have to cross the on and off ramps of Route 93 two times each day.

"Even Raytheon has crossing guards for their employees. What are you going to do about crossing guards for children who have to cross 93?" Ms. Hurley asked.

Mr. Hubbell told her if she wasn't satisfied with the walking conditions for her children she should either pay the busing fee or drive her children to school.

Ms. Hurley shot back that she works full time and could not drive her children to school.

"I don't have responsibility to get your children to school," Mr. Hubbell responded.

"I'm sorry, but that's the way it is and that's the way I feel," he added.

According to Frank Paul, school business manager, parents still have time to pay for spaces on the buses.

"Of all our buses there are only three that are filled to capacity," Mr. Paul said.

Six more teachers hired

The School Committee approved hiring six more teachers to reduce teacher/pupil ratios when school opens next week, but they voted not to include another guidance counselor at the high school in that package.

Ruby Easton, head of the high school guidance department, told the committee her department has lost five positions in the past three years.

The committee has hired a total of 10 people, including four hired last week for the elementary schools:

Bancroft Elementary: Full-time fifth-grade teacher.

Sanborn Elementary: Part-time kindergarten teacher.

South Elementary: Full-time third-grade teacher.

West Elementary: Full-time first- and fifth-grade teachers and part-time kindergarten teacher.

Doherty Middle: Full-time sixth-grade teacher and part-time foreign language teacher.

All elementaries: One eighth-tenths time art teacher and one sixth-tenths time music teacher.

Clifford Scott: Keep teacher-pupil ratios the way they are

Mr. Scott was a member of the superintendent search committee.

"During that process he showed us he had the analytical skills and the fortitude for the job, as well as the personality to work with the committee," Dr. Outwin said following Mr. Scott's appointment Monday night.

Mr. Scott was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

In interviews for the School Committee seat, he said his priority is to maintain teacher-pupil ratios. He also said busing fees are discriminatory because they place the burden of supporting education on the shoulders of residents whose children live less than two miles from school.

"I'd rather see no fees," Mr. Scott said during his interview last week.

"But I wouldn't sacrifice teacher-pupil ratios."

Who voted for whom

Dr. Outwin and fellow School Committee members Susan Poore, Richard Hubbell and Susan Jenkins voted for Clifford Scott, along with Selectman Charles Wesson.

Selectmen Gerald Silverman, James Barenboim and Larry Larsen cast their votes for Joanne Marden.

Selectman William Downs voted for Debra Silberstein.

Mr. Scott works for Bolt, Beranek and Newman in Cambridge as an development consultant. He has a master's degree in social planning from Boston College.

He and his wife, Ellen, have two daughters, a 10-year-old who will attend Bancroft Elementary School in September and a 4-year-old.

EDITORIAL

Turning kids into book worms

Seven-year-old Kaitlin O'Malley decided the most interesting person in the Aug. 15 issue of the Townsmen was Suzanne Polizzi, a young dancer featured in Towntalk who recently traveled to Virginia Beach to perform.

Seven-year-old Sai Lakshmi decided the most interesting story in the Aug. 1 paper was "Fulfilling a dream," the page-one feature on Dwight Davis, who at age 40 decided to learn to fly.

And 6-year-old Andrew Ong wrote that the highlight of the Aug. 8 issue was "My children are going to get killed," a story about Andover's public school bus fees. Young Andrew said, "We want to ride the school bus but we wish we don't have to pay the fee."

The children were three of more than 100 children, ages 5 to 12, who participated in the Townsmen's Family Reading Challenge. You can see the list of participants in the story starting on page 2.

The excellent news is that children were reading. And children were reading and discussing stories with their parents. They were reading the Townsmen, other newspapers, books, magazines. Reading.

Each week for 10 weeks the paper ran a coupon that included a reading task for students to complete. Then their names were put into a drawing and three winners each week were photographed for the newspaper and given a T-shirt.

We heard from a woman who clipped the coupons to save them for her grandchild who was visiting late in the summer. We heard from a mother whose 5-year-old wasn't reading yet but who wanted to participate. (Answer: Yes, he can take part; just read with him, that's what counts - that he learn to love to read.)

Yes, we want youngsters reading the Townsmen. And yes, we want youngsters reading anything, because reading is necessary and it's such a pleasure.

The Townsmen Family Reading Challenge will be run again next summer. In the meantime, make sure to thank the advertisers who supported the reading program.

Reading is essential to, well, we believe most things in life, and a program like this one helps teach young people that reading is fun too.

Bob dealt tenderly with Andover

By Stephen McGettrick

"Andover didn't get hit as bad as this," the small boy vacationing with his family on Martha's Vineyard said to his friend.

"It never does," the friend replies. "We got ripped off. This must have been so cool."

That was the last I heard of the conversation as I crossed Main Street in Edgartown to get to the less congested side of the street, but the conversation stuck with me for the rest of the day. Why it did, I'm not exactly sure.

Maybe it was because of the innocent ignorance it carried, the shallow idea that being through a hurricane would be nothing more than an inconsequential ride at an amusement park.

Or maybe it was because it reminded me of something I probably said after Hurricane Gloria feebly brushed our area back in October 1985.

It has been more than a week since Hurricane Bob uninvitedly tore its way through the Vineyard, and much of the cleanup is still going on. Millions of dollars worth of damage to boats, houses and cars is only part of the aftermath that this ride left behind. Much was lost, but luckily, none of it was human life.

In Edgartown's harbor alone, 85 boats were thrown ashore by the wind and the storm surge, while 15 have sunk. Most of the houses and cars throughout the island were damaged by falling limbs.

Electricity is yet to be fully restored to the island as frustrated customers sit in the dark cursing Bob for making their steaks turn bad and their showers cold.

The loss of electricity also means financially worse times in an already troubled economy for the small businesses that were unable to serve patrons during what is traditionally the busiest time of the year.

This ride was definitely not worth it.

And yet, there is something inside many of us that longs to experience the power of a hurricane or an earthquake or other acts of natural violence. We like to be scared - at least until we find out the consequences. Then we realize that being scared isn't such a good thing.

But after everything is all cleaned up and things are back to normal, that "out of sight, out of mind" theory comes back to haunt us and our insides long to be scared all over again.

At last I can say I've experienced a hurricane, and a mighty powerful one at that. Winds on the island were officially clocked at 98 mph as well as being reported in other places on the Vineyard as high as 110.

I managed to muster up enough courage to take a walk outside to view the storm's awesome force. To see pictures of a hurricane or to watch it on TV does not even compare to the experience of walking in it and witnessing its destruction first hand. To see a massive elm tree uprooted and a 62-foot yacht thrown around the harbor like a rag doll before finally coming to rest next to a hotel pool is, to say the least, not an everyday experience.

Having an invisible gust of wind practically knock you over is sort of eerie but, in a weird sense, enjoyable.

Walking the streets, I found myself constantly looking up and behind me, fearing one of the falling branches might be heading my way.

Never did I not want to be some place and yet want to be there so badly in my life. Once I was out for a little while, there was no way I was going back inside.

Understanding Chiropractic

by Mark F. DeLorenzo, D.C.

GOING TO YOUR HEAD

Chiropractors are well-acquainted with the neck injury commonly known as "whiplash". They attend to a large share of more than 400,000 whiplash patients who sustain their injuries as a result of the more than 4 million rear-end automobile collisions in the U. S. each year. Many of these injuries could be minimized or prevented altogether with the proper adjustment of the car seat's head restraint. The headrest should be set so that it reaches the top of the ears (at least ten inches from above the seat back) in order to prevent the head from whipping backward upon impact. The head restraint is intended to support the head, not the neck, in an accident. If a driver or passenger is involved in a rear-end collision, he or she should be evaluated for injury which may not be immediately painful or discernible to the patient.

There are many preventive steps that can be taken to help avoid injury and health problems. Chiropractic will teach you how to have improved health as well as treat the problem. For more information, call us at DELORENZO CHIROPRACTIC GROUP, 475-5042, for an appointment. Our office is located at 15 Central Street. I am currently serving as president of the Mass. But thinking back on it now, I can't believe I wanted to be out there. I was having fun being scared and having too much fun to be scared.

After surveying all the dam-to go through one again. But after a while of having life nor-

Andover definitely did not get ripped off. Of that, I'm sure.

Cameras will roll here this fall for Paramount flick

By Don Staruk

The cameras will roll in Andover this fall when Paramount Pictures comes to the Lanam Club to film scenes for School Ties, a movie about a small-town kid who attends a prep school in Massachusetts.

The Lanam Club will be used as the set for a school "mixer," according to Jeff McLain, assistant to the location manager.

Mr. McLain said no big-name stars had been signed to appear in the movie, but that they were still working getting the actors.

"It's mostly young kids. It's going to be like the new rat pack," Mr. McLain said.

Fred Francis (Glory) is the director of photography.

The movie is about a small-town kid who goes to a Massachusetts prep school on a football scholarship, according to Mr. McLain. The boy is Jewish and the movie deals with racial issues as well as a cheating scandal.

An evening of jazz and dancing comes to Andover

The Rolling Green Host Hotel on Lowell Street will present "An Evening with the Big, Bad Illinois Jacquet Big Band" Friday, Nov. 22, for an evening of hot jazz and dancing from 8:30 p.m. until 1 a.m. The show will be hosted by WGBH FM's Ron Della Chiesa. Reserved seat tickets at $32 and $25 are on sale at all Ticketmaster locations or by calling (617) 931-2000. Tickets may also be purchased at the front desk at the Rolling Green or by calling the hotel.

A buffet with champagne and cocktails will be available for purchase during the evening. The Rolling Green will also offer a special overnight package. With the purchase of this hotel package, it is also possible to purchase special inner circle seating. Call the hotel for more information.

Tenor saxophonist Jean Baptiste Illinois Jacquet will be joined by a 16-piece big band. Mr. Jacquet has performed with Nat King Cole, Cab Calloway, The Lionel Hampton Band, Charles Mingus, Lester Young, Count Basie Band, Ella Fitzgerald, Oscar Peterson, Dizzy Gillespie, Buddy Rich and Charlie Parker. He is most noted for his tenor solo on "Flying Home," which he created while touring with the Hampton Band.

Mr. Jacquet was also a favorite of TV star Ed Sullivan and performed on the first coast-to-coast broadcast of Mr. Sullivan's New York television show, Toast Of The Town, which aired on CBS TV in July 1948. Mr. Jacquet recorded over the years on the Apollo, Aladdin and Savoy record labels until 1949, when he was signed to an exclusive contract with RCA Victor.

His first European tour was in 1954 with Sarah Vaughan and Coleman Hawkins, and 1966 marked the beginning of Mr. Jacquet's trio with Jo Jones on drums and Milt Buckner on piano and organ.

During the 1960s and '70s he recorded mostly with European record labels; currently he is with Atlantic Records and his latest release is called "Illinois Jacquet and His Big Band - Jacquet's Got It!"

Annie Hall shows Woody Allen at his best

By M.E. Sullivan

Editor's note: As their last movie reviews of the summer, the Townsman's reviewers will look back at their favorite movies of all time. Alison Wolfe's review will run next week.

OK, think of your favorite movie of all time. You have to be quick: This is the type of question that has to be answered by the first thing that comes to mind. It's tough, isn't it? It puts you on the spot, like when someone asks you, "What's your favorite food?" or "Who's your favorite Russian novelist?" Your mind draws a blank or a number of different possibilities materializes.

You think it over for a while and realize you keep coming back to the same answer, and surprisingly enough, it's the one you'd originally thought of.

That's how it is with me and Annie Hall.

I love this movie, the one that won the Academy Award in 1977 for best picture, the one that includes Paul Simon, Marshall McLuhan and the late Colleen Dewhurst among the members of its eclectic cast, the one that made "la-dee-da" the catch phrase of that year and firmly established Diane Keaton as what one writer called "Woody Allen's own Liv Ullmann." It's sweet and funny and bitter and hilarious and all the more appealing because, at times, it's like watching your own life played out.

Alvie Singer (Woody Allen), a nice Jewish boy from Manhattan, falls in love with Annie Hall (Keaton), a WASP from Chipewa Falls, Wisc., who eats pastrami on white bread with mayo and still uses words like "neat," even in the big city.

The flaky sweetness of the two is so captivating, you can't help but think they were made for each other. The situations they find themselves in stem from the quirks in their personalities without ever seeming contrived or artificial. This is a movie, though; and with plenty of allusions to Ingmar Bergman and arty reflexive cinema, never lets itself or the viewer forget it: "If only real life could be like this."

But life is messy and so is love - and so it goes with Alvie and Annie until their love becomes nothing more than a "dead shark," going nowhere and dragging them both into the doctor's office and he says to him, "Doctor, I need your help. My brother has turned into a chicken."

"And the doctor says, 'Well, then, take him to the butcher.'"

"And the man says, 'I can't. I still need the eggs.'"

Love is like that for Alvie Singer and for all of us: We all need the eggs. And we need more movies like Annie Hall to show us how much. This is Woody Allen, the greatest American filmmaker, at his best.

M.E. Sullivan is the daughter of James and Mary Ellen Sullivan of 41 Dascomb Road. She is a 1986 graduate of Andover High School and a 1991 graduate of McGill University in Montreal, Quebec, where she majored in English literature. Ms. Sullivan also attended L'Universite de Haute Normandie in Rouen, France. She is currently living and working on Cape Cod, and with her spending habits, hopes to boost Massachusetts out of its recession single-handedly.

Police arrest suspect in Christy's holdup

Officer Dennis Lane, who happened to be in the area on a call when he heard about the robbery, followed the suspect and called for assistance when the suspect entered a building, according to Lt. Stephen Avery.

The suspect came back out of the house and again fled on foot. Officers Daniel Igoe, Randall Peterson and Colin Radford and Sgt. James Hashem joined Officer Lane and chased Mr. Owen into Dundee Park, where he was caught.

The gun was found on Mr. Owen, according to the lieutenant. The money was found in an ice cream container in a freezer in the suspect's apartment, and the mask in a trash container outside Christy's.

"We had a little bit of luck, but it was a good job by everybody," Lt. Avery said.

Many Andover residents participated in last year's Sports for Life, which benefits Holy Family Hospital and Medical Center's cancer management center.

Sports for Life benefits cancer center

Holy Family Hospital and Medical Center will hold its annual Sports for Life (formerly called Bon-a-Thon) Sept. 14 to benefit the hospital's cancer management center.

The event includes a 100-mile bike ride; 25-mile bike ride; and a five-mile walk/run.

Sports for Life began several years ago as a 20-mile bike ride in memory of Mary C. Gelineau, a patient who died of cancer. Her family and friends chose to preserve her memory by raising money to provide services for other families coping with cancer.

The cancer management center will open in December.

For more information, contact the hospital's foundation office.

Town Grill looks for championship

By Rick Harrison

Town Grill and Threads of Ireland, both Andover-based teams, carried it down to the last game in their battle for the 1991 Greater-Lawrence/Lowell Men's Baseball League championship.

The two playoff finalists split a pair of games last week at Alumni Field in Lowell, Town Grill rallying from a 7-0 deficit to win 9-7 and Threads handing previously-undefeated Dave Miles his first loss 4-1.

That left No. 2 seed Town Grill at 5-2 in the playoffs and 17-6 overall, while surprising Threads improved to 4-2 in post-season play and 14-8 overall.

The winner-take-all title game was scheduled for last

Indian Ridge swim team topples Winchester

The Indian Ridge swim team toppled the Winchester Swim and Tennis Club and Winchester Boat Club in a recent tri-meet, raising its record to 3-2 in the A Division of the Summer Aquatic League.

The Indian Ridge squad, led by quadruple winners Danielle Farrah, Christine O'Neill, Tim Witman, Jen Blongiewicz, Chris Blongiewicz, Kristen Hubbell and Matt Liberty, took command from the outset and coasted to victory.

Indian Ridge concluded its dual meet season Aug. 3 with a hard-fought loss to Russell Mill. Third-year coaches J.B. Burgess, Michele Fox and Jeff Hart said they couldn't be happier with the group effort put forth all season and the continued improvement of this growing program.

Results of the Winchester Swim Club and Winchester Boat Club:

Diving 12 and under, Ashley Murry, first; Courtney Famiglietti, second; Jeff Scott, third. 18 and under: Kasie Kearins, first; Missy Famiglietti, second; Matt Stitham, first; Tim Stitham, third.

man presstime, under the lights in Lowell.

Town Grill, 9-7

Threads of Ireland scored three runs in the top of the first inning, and four more in the second, to jump to a commanding 7-0 lead.

But TG battled back for the victory with three runs in the third, two in the fourth, three in the fifth and one in the bottom of the sixth stanza.

While the Grill was rallying offensively, player-manager Ed Kruger held Threads hitless and scoreless over 5.1 frames of outstanding relief. Righthander Kruger (3-2 record), a control pitcher who was hitting his spots, struck out just one and walked only two.

Joe Thibodeau launched the long uphill climb from the 7-0 hole by drawing a walk in the third. Chris Sapuppo followed with an RBI triple, John Glynn spanked a run-scoring single, Kevin Rourke singled, and Dave Dyjak made it 7-3 with an RBI single.

In the fourth Cam Deery singled, stole second and rode home on Bill Sarcione's base hit. Thibodeau walked again, Sapuppo walked to load the bases, and Dave Miles's fielder's choice grounder to second base rescued Sarcione with the fifth run.

Town Grill completed the comeback in the fifth when Rourke walked, Cam Deery ripped a two-out RBI double, Pete Reming singled to plate Deery with the tying run, and Sarcione's fly ball was misplayed for a run-scoring error to put TG ahead 8-7.

The winners added an insurance run in the sixth as Sapuppo singled, Miles sacrificed him to second, and Glynn ripped an RBI single.

Cam Deery finished the game with three hits while sizzling Sapuppo and Glynn added two apiece.

John Sheedy and John Delaney spiked singles in the early going for Threads.

Grill shortstop Peter Reming was a defensive standout.

Threads, 4-1

Threads of Ireland bounced back to hand Dave Miles (11-1) his first loss in 12 decisions this summer, lacing eight hits off the former Central Catholic and current Merrimack College star hurler.

Town Grill gave Miles a slim 1-0 lead to work with, scoring its lone run in the top of the second stanza, but Threads rallied for three runs in the fourth and another in the sixth.

Righty Jay Crofton was the complete-game winning pitcher, scattering four TG safeties while walking two and whiffing four.

Miles, authoring his 11th complete game, yielded eight hits, walked four and struck out four.

In the Town Grill second • Kevin Rourke singled, took second on an over-throw, and scored on a single by Miles.

An uncharacteristic three walks got Miles in trouble in the fourth, and key singles were contributed by John Delaney and Paul Sheedy of Threads.

Delaney hammered a run-producing triple in the sixth for Threads.

Cam Deery and John Glynn had the other two TG hits, both singles, while Delaney finished with three hits and John Sheedy had two for the winners.

Once again TG shortstop Peter Reming was sharp defensively.

Baseball greats join in fund-raising Marriott hosts golf tourney

Andover Marriott hotel recently joined baseball greats of yesteryear as part of third annual Major League Baseball Players Alumni golf tournament to find a cure for cystic fibrosis.

The golf tournament and fund-raising auctions held at the Indian Ridge Golf Club in Andover, raised more than $55,000 for the Joey Fund and the Massachusetts Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

Cystic fibrosis is America's leading genetic killer of children and young adults. Honoring the memory of Joey O'Donnell, a young victim of CF, the Joey Fund is an independent fund established by private individuals to give financial assistance for CF-related problems to patients and their families.

One of four corporate sponsors, the Andover Marriott donated tournament accommodations for the baseball alums during the four-day fund-raising event.

"The Major League Baseball Players Alumni Golf Tournament gives the Andover Marriott an opportunity to support a very worthwhile and needy cause, while simultaneously giving hotel associates the added thrill of meeting a number of baseball's greatest players," said Scott Alemany, director of marketing for the Andover Marriott. "It has been a pleasure to work with so many generous and selfless people for the benefit of those less fortunate."

Co-chaired by Jerry Moses and Dick Radatz, this year's tournament attracted more than 40 major league baseball alumni, including Dom DiMaggio, Mark Fidrych, Tug McGraw, Bill Lee, Jim Rice and Jim Lonborg.

Following a day of golf, baseball alums and supporting participants took part in a silent and live auction for prizes that included golf lessons from the "pro" alums themselves; autographed baseballs from Stan Musial, Nolan Ryan, Ted Williams and Mickey Mantle; tickets for four to a Red Sox vs. New York Yankees game following dinner at Fenway Park's Diamond Club; and a three-night, four-day deluxe golf and hotel package for two to Palm Springs.

Ace Upholstery Company, Inc.

Pictured above is Ace Upholstery Company's owner, Frank Moreau, assisting a customer, Sandy Beecher of Atkinson, N.H., who is choosing materials for her home. Reupholstering allows the flexibility to custom design furniture and create a "decorator look" for the home. It is less expensive to reupholster fine furniture than to replace it with new furniture of the same quality. In addition to the expert craftsmanship offered by the skilled employees, they offer a discount of 20 percent on all fabrics.

Frank Moreau offers much more than expert craftsmanship in reupholstering. Furniture frames are reconditioned, cushions replaced, antiques restored and woodwork refinished.

Window treatments, including draperies, cornice boards and valances are made and installed. Ace Upholstery, Inc. makes custom headboards, upholstered bed frames and mirrors. They also carry vertical blinds. Custom made sofas and chairs can be ordered to fit the available space. Window seats can be made to your specifications.

They accommodate the do-it-yourselfer with a large inventory of replacement cushions, foam rubber and other materials needed. In addition to the residential customer, they also serve businesses, restaurants, and do boat interiors and auto upholstery repairs.

This year marks the 11th year of business for Ace Upholstery and Frank Moreau continues his commitment to provide quality work at competitive prices. All work is performed on the premises by skilled craftsmen whose workmanship is guaranteed against defects. All areas of the shop are open to customers. They are invited to view the transformations taking place in the workrooms at any time.

A shop-at-home service is available along with advice on interior decorating to help coordinate the decor. They offer free pickup and delivery.

Ace Upholstery Company is located at 164 S. Union St., in Lawrence and is open Monday through Friday from 8 to 5 and Saturday from 8 to 1; evenings by appointment. Telephone: 683-2542. Rosemary C. Bernal Local firm's business is up 40 percent

In 1975 the company took an optic technology available in Japan and combined it with its own light-transmitting fiber to develop the "needle-scope," a type of viewing lens fit into a tube smaller than a straw, which allowed surgeons to see inside the knee without cutting it open.

Once surgeons could see the damage inside a knee, they needed tools to work inside without cutting the knee open.

In 1979, the interarticular shaving system was developed, "a cutting and sucking device that was used in cutting and removing cartilage."

"And that really was the birth of the company," Mr. Federico said.

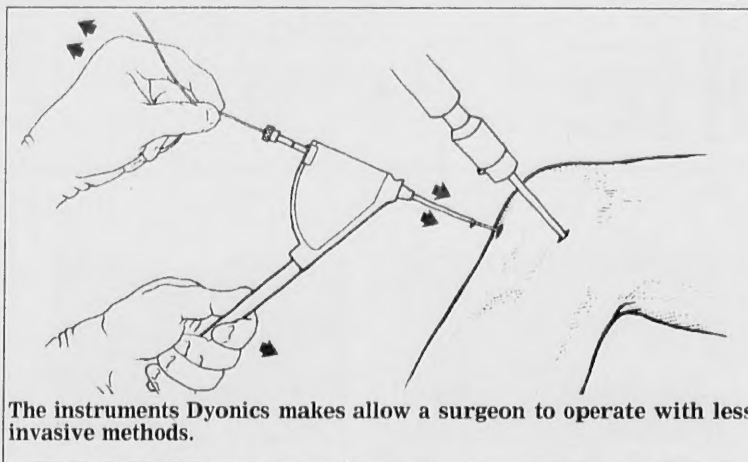

Growth in Andover

The company moved to the building on Dascomb Road, the former American Cyanamide Co., in 1980.

Sales were big at first because the arthroscopic technology was new and surgeons were buying. The market sobered up after 1981 and the company went through a slack period until 1984-'85 when sales began to pick up again.

The second surge was due to consumer awareness of, and subsequent demand for, the technology that could help patients avoid major surgery.

The company recently introduced a less invasive treatment for carpal tunnel syndrome, a condition much like repetitive motion syndrome. Carpal tunnel is an affliction that causes pain and loss of movement in the hand.

The instruments Dyonics makes allow a surgeon to operate with less invasive methods.

Carpal tunnel syndrome is a growing problem among computer users.

Consumer awareness that kicked in and drove the market in the mid '80s continues to feed Dyonics today.

"Now we've got a procedures growth going on," Mr. Federico said.

The number of arthroscopic procedures performed increases 15 to 20 percent each year, according to Mr. Federico.

"And that's helping this company here in Andover continue to grow," he said.

Dyonics completed a major renovation to the Dascomb Road building in 1990.

"We spent $5 million and created about 100 new jobs," Mr. Federico said.

Dyonics has grown from 180 employees at the Andover plant in 1985 to 400 today.

The jobs are both "high-tech jobs and low-tech," according to Mr. Federico, and include electronics engineers, metal machinists, fiberoptic technicians and more.

Smith & Nephew, a British-based health-care company with offices worldwide, bought Dyonics in 1987.

The company has since bought a company in Oklahoma City that makes the cameras used in Dyonics video equipment and which employs another 100 people.

Dyonics also has a sales and marketing force of about 200 people in the field.

Expansion plan

Plans to adapt Dyonics' visualization part of the arthroscopic technology for use in other fields of medicine has the company looking to expand its facilities.

"We are going to introduce a new division. It will focus on the fast-growing area of endoscopic surgery," Mr. Federico said.

While the visual technology is currently used for orthopedics and gynecology, the new division will adapt the technology in other areas of medicine, such as non-invasive gall bladder or hernia surgery just for starters.

"Any organ could be a candidate," Mr. Johnston said.

The company is looking to locate the sales and marketing operation of the new division in another building nearby, possibly over the line in Tewksbury. But plans being discussed include expansion of the Andover facility as well.

The Dascomb Road building, which will be paid for this year, sits on 21 acres of land.

"So we have the potential to add, or build another facility," Mr. Federico said.

Mr. Federico said the expansion, which could begin as early as January of 1992, may only mean 15 to 20 jobs at first, "but the potential is enormous."

The company is also planning to expand its overseas sales from the current 15 percent to 40 percent in the next five years.
